Main conference: July 3-5, 2017

Emerging Scholars Colloquium: July 2, 2017

Deadline for submission of full papers (main conference and ESC): January 31, 2017

The Critical Perspectives on Accounting Conference brings together accounting faculty, doctoral students and researchers from other disciplines who are interested in critical accounting research. The Conference is held every three years. It aims to build and consolidate the network of active supporters of critical accounting scholarship. The Conference also seeks to encourage critical reflexivity on the development of accounting prescriptions and the practice of accounting in a world facing a multitude of challenges. Further, the Conference aims to generate substantive conversations on how accounting might be improved in the hope of constructing a better and fairer world.

Research areas of interest to the Conference are as follows (this list is indicative and not exhaustive):

- Financial accounting's role in the processes of international capital formation, including its impact on stock market stability and international banking activities
- Management accounting's role in organizing the labor process
- The relationship between accounting and the state in various social formations
- Studies of accounting's historical role, as a means of "remembering" the subject's social and conflictual character
- The role (and consequences) of sustainability accounting in promoting discourses and images consistent with the claim of corporate social responsibility
- Studies aiming to question and deconstruct corporate governance discourses and practices
- The role of tax regulation and practices in engendering social inequities
- The power of the accounting establishment in promoting neoliberalism and financialization
- Accounting's role in globalization processes
- Antagonisms between the social and private character of accounting
- Accounting's role in gender, class, racial, and ethnic conflicts in the workplace and society

The CPA Conference aims to stimulate an inclusive and energizing atmosphere. All papers will be reviewed before being accepted to the Conference. A discussant will be assigned if the paper is accepted. By submitting a paper you agree that you, or one of your co-authors, a) may be asked to review a paper submitted to the Conference; b) will present your own paper during the Conference; and c) will discuss another paper during the Conference (note: "b" and "c" only apply to authors whose papers are accepted to the Conference).

Authors will be notified of the organizing committee's decision by February 28, 2017.
