RESEARCH PROFILE

I am interested in understanding peoples' experiences with stigma and social identity in organizations. In particular, I examine how people whose social identities are devalued (e.g., people with disabilities; formerly incarcerated people; racial, sexual, and gender minorities) navigate employment contexts (e.g., job search, workplace) to avoid, manage, and/or overcome stigmatization and its consequences for their work lives and careers. I also examine how organizational initiatives regarding diversity and inclusion play a role in exacerbating and mitigating peoples' experiences of stigmatization.
